I invented a similar fabrication for the third one of us, and without another word the Russian officer got up from the table, returned his pistol to its holster, staggered to his horse, mounted, and rode away. We moved cohesively at first, but groups began to break off and go their separate ways. SellerRating:. Ultimately, there were about 3, women slave laborers—mostly Poles, Russians, Yugoslavs, and assorted other Europeans, primarily Eastern but a smattering from the West—and perhaps 3, American men, who had spent the last months of the war in the comparative luxury of Stalag IIA; a few hundred Frenchmen, who had One More River to Cross given their parole and had been allowed to work in town unguarded; and several hundred Americans, who, like me, had been held as slave laborers in the Kommandos satellite to Stalag IIA. For the time being, the most prudent course of action seemed to be to stay with this crowd as it moved west. The oldest version in Higginson, doesn't mention animals.

FrereJacques.Quicklinks.Shortly, we caught up with a horse-drawn wagon and about a dozen French ex-POWs.
