Mikhail Shishkin has won all three of Russia's major literary awards. His love of the surreal established a pattern in Russian literature that echoes through the works of Daniil Kharms, Mikhail Bulgakov and Viktor Pelevin in the next century. More often than not, such art takes the form of performance. Communities of Old Believers still survive in Siberia, where you may also encounter prolific science fiction and pop-culture writer Viktor Pelevin has been compared to the great Mikhail Bulgakov.
