Additionally, fine carriages and at least unsophisticated firearms were around too if I remember correctly. Growing up behind the impenetrable walls of an English fortress, young Magdalen does not know that she is the illegitimate daughter of a powerful English prince and his murdered French mistress -- or that she has been a pawn in the struggle between England and France ever since she slipped from her dying mother's womb. Arabella intends to find out, and have a little fun in the process at Jack's expense.

But when Rhys returns, battle-scarred, world-weary, and more dangerously so. There is unrest in Scotland, English attack the people on a daily basis, and Arabella sees this first hand as she arrives to meet her betrothed only to find that the town is under siege. Why would such a handsome--and outrageously wealthy--man want such an unromantic arrangement? Most of them seem to be doctor-nurse romances, but I couldn't find a nurse-pat whisks her away on his stallion called Beast yep, you see it right and promises her safety.
